Course Introduction:

This interdisciplinary International Relations course unpacks the history, theory, and practice of global diplomacy, international security and peace with theoretical and empirical analysis of the primary issues in contemporary IR studies, including the environment, migration, multilateral institutions, nuclear proliferation, and peacekeeping.

Come and Join us!

- Students learn by participating in online lessons, based on crises including the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, current United Nations' crises and North Korea's nuclear program.
- Guest lectures from experts in diplomacy deepen understanding of current developments in global politics.
